Lassino, March 10.—The supreme court today handed down an opinion in a mandamus case, Canfield vs. Clare Circuit Judge in which the writ was granted February 3, compelling the respondent to vacate an order for a stay of proceedings. It establishes the rule that a circuit judge has no power to extend the time for settling a bill of exceptions for a longer period than twenty days in chambers. In this case the relator had recovered judgment against Mary Cook in the Clare circuit for $510. A stay of proceedings was granted for sixty days conditioned upon the filing of a bond within twenty days. The bond, when filed, was defective and the respondent at chambers made an order continuing the stay and permitting defendant to file new bond. This court holds it beyond his power. This power having been expressly conferred by statute upon the court, it cannot be exercised by the judge in chambers. LANSING, March 10 .- The supreme
